ROCKWATER ENERGY SOLUTIONS ACQUIRES VENCOR PRODUCTION TESTING SERVICES

Rockwater Extends Flowback and Well Testing Offering into Western Canada by Joining Forces with Vencor

Houston, TX, December 18, 2012 – Rockwater Energy Solutions, Inc., a fluids management and environmental solutions provider to the oilfield industry, announced today the acquisition of Vencor Production Testing Ltd., a production testing services provider headquartered in Whitecourt, Alberta, Canada.

Vencor has been serving major exploration and production companies throughout Western Canada for over 12 years and has grown to a business with a fleet of more than 25 production testing vessels and over 60 employees. The addition of Vencor extends the Rockwater offering of flowback and production testing beyond the current U.S. footprint and strengthens the Rockwater fluids management service offering throughout Western Canada.

“Our flowback and well testing services have been highly successful operations for Rockwater in the U.S., and we are excited to have Vencor joining the team to extend flowback and production testing capability into Western Canada,” commented Larry O’Donnell, Chairman, President and CEO of Rockwater. “This offering will complement our current portfolio of Canadian services, as we continue to build the full fluids life cycle solution in each major North American basin.”

“Vencor is pleased to join the Rockwater team in building the premier fluids management provider in Western Canada,” said Greg Tipper, President and CEO of Vencor. “We see great opportunities for the two companies to benefit from one another’s strong reputations and complementary service offerings throughout this region,” commented Robin Lang, COO of Vencor.
